Human Rights Research and Education Centre

Constitution

1. MISSION STATEMENT

Values

1.1 The human rights of individuals and peoples represent a universal system of values upon which the activities and interventions of the Human Rights Research and Education Centre are based. These values include:

- Human dignity;
- Equality;
- Respect for fundamental freedoms;
- Social justice and the right of each person to economic, psychological, physical and democratic security;
- The right of peoples to self-determination.

Human rights imply a relationship of indivisibility and interdependence as between themselves.

The mandate

1.2 The Centre is a university-based research and teaching institution. As such, it promotes research training and support, and the creation and dissemination of knowledge and analysis with respect to human rights.

1.3 The Centre has obligations vis-à-vis the community. As such, it contributes to the mobilisation of knowledge while ensuring respect for, and promotion of, human rights values.

1.4 As a research institution in a university context, the Centre places great importance on the following operating principles:

- Academic freedom;
- Freedom of expression;
- Research and communication ethics;
- Respect for others.
Principles of governance

1.5 The Centre has a mandate to analyse this system critically, paying particular attention to the needs of the holders of rights, and to the obligations of non-state, public and institutional actors who should ensure respect for such rights.

Human rights: a multidisciplinary concept at the heart of public policy across Canada and the world

1.6 The mandate of the Centre presumes an acceptance of the need to approach issues regarding human rights from a multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary perspective, both in order to respect such rights and to explore that which they require in a complex, interconnected world. To this end, the Centre intends to place particular emphasis on public policy questions concerning peace, migration and immigration, health, environment, international trade and investment, poverty and vulnerable groups.

The means

1.7 In order to fulfil its mandate, the Centre will place particular emphasis on the following strategies:

- Its mandate takes into account the University Strategic Plan;
- It achieves its mandate through strategic use of new communication technologies;
- It puts its mandate into action taking into account the different contexts of today’s world: local, national, regional, international and global;
- It devotes a significant part of its resources to the research and corresponding needs of graduate students from all disciplines and of research centres and institutes at the University of Ottawa;
- It will ensure that it surrounds itself with partners, researchers and collaborators that are representative of its mandate;
- In order to make real the desire to come to a better understanding of the global system of human rights, it will ensure that it retains both the quality and the capacity to welcome foreign students and visitors.

Membership

2.20 The appointment of Centre Members is vested in the Management Committee. In deciding whom to appoint as Members, the Management Committee shall be guided by the terms of the Constitution regarding Membership and by the Mission Statement which appears at the outset of the Constitution.

2.21 Membership is organized into the following categories:

- Full academic members;
- Associate community members;
- Graduate student members;
- Affiliated university members.

Full academic members

2.22 Full academic members shall be full-time professors at the University of Ottawa. Non-full-time professors and others who wish to be associated with the Centre should nominate themselves as Associate community members or as Graduate student members.

2.23 Initiative for appointment of full academic members may come either from the candidates themselves, or from the Centre itself (speaking through its Management Committee), or from the Deans of the sponsoring faculties. In the latter case, Deans should verify with the Research Director (who should, where possible, consult with the Management Committee) that the proposed candidate is suitable for nomination as a member of the Centre.

Associate community members

2.24 Associate community members may be drawn from the wider human rights community (as described in the Mission Statement which appears at the outset of this Constitution).

2.25 Initiative for appointment of Associate community members may come from the candidates themselves, from the Centre, or from one of the Deans of the sponsoring faculties. Decisions regarding membership are ultimately a matter for the Management Committee.

Student members

2.26 Student members may be drawn from amongst graduate students pursuing work under the Direction of a Full academic member of the Centre, or involved in human rights and social justice projects within the three sponsoring faculties.

2.27 Initiative for appointment of student members may come from the candidates themselves, from the Centre, or from members in other categories of membership. Decisions regarding membership are ultimately a matter for the Management Committee.

Affiliated university members

2.28 Affiliated university members are members of the University of Ottawa community who are neither Full academic members of Student members; they are seen as capable of representing the interests of the University community.

2.29 Initiative for appointment of Associate university members may come from the candidates themselves, from the Centre, or from one of the Deans of the sponsoring faculties. Decisions regarding membership are ultimately a matter for the Management Committee.

Roles and responsibilities of members
2.30 The attendant roles and responsibilities of membership shall be determined as soon as practicable by the Management Committee. Membership rules will reflect the principle of reciprocity of rights and duties between members and the Centre and the acceptance of Centre’s mission and values as stated in Constitution. This information should then be set out in a document held on file at the Centre, and, if deemed appropriate, eventually incorporated in this Constitution by means amendment.

The Centre’s Languages

2.31 The languages of the Centre are French and English.

Amendment of the Constitution

2.32 Amendments to this Constitution may be proposed by any of the member of the Management Committee.

2.33 Any proposed amendment must set out clearly both the existing Constitution in its entirety, and the proposed new wording or new provisions.

2.34 The proposed amendment must be presented to the Advisory Board which may make comments and suggestions as it deems appropriate.

2.35 The proposed amendment may be modified, as deemed appropriate by the proposer, in response to comments and suggestions from the Advisory Board, and presented in due form (as set out in this part) for adoption.

2.36 To be adopted, a proposed amendment must be approved by at least two-thirds of all members of the Management Committee.

2.37 If an amendment is adopted, the Executive Director shall prepare a new version of the Constitution reflecting both the newly adopted amendment and, as a footnote, the text as amended. This historical version shall be kept on file at the Centre. An up-to-date current version of the Constitution shall also be made available for consultation at the Centre.
